

Equestrian Arena

(Driftwood, Texas)

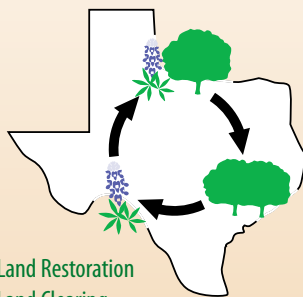

In order to create an equestrian area 75-100 mesquites and other trees were removed. Under ordinary circumstances trees would be forestry mowed to ground level. That was not an acceptable option in this case, as the horses could be injured if they stepped on a stump.

Using a C100 attachment, the Natural Texas Arborist pulled trees and roots out like a carrot, and eliminated stump hazards.
